

The XX Factor: The Art of Designing Your Career

June 27 at Genentech— register at www.oregonbio.org/event-class/oregon-bio-women-2019/

Emcee:
Liisa Bozinovic,
Executive Director at
Oregon Bioscience
Association

*Weaving your Talents,
Purpose and Goals into the
Tapestry of Your Career*

Dorota Shortell, CEO at
Simplicity Product
Development

Keynote:

Jane Boutwell (left)

Founder, Well Said Consulting

Communications: Do you know key nonverbal tips for powerful and engaging communication? Whether you are talking with your peers, upper management or simply trying to be heard in a meeting, you will walk away with powerful nonverbal awareness and tips for effective and engaging communication.

Ann Demaree (left)

Vice President of Business Development, Cardiac Insight

Professional Development: Get your PD on! This session will provide an interactive discover me/discover you discussion about how we can each work to develop our professional selves, with opportunity to do a self-audit on our career goals and priorities. Attendees will develop a short, personal “professional development plan,” as a key takeaway.

Michaele Armstrong, Manager of Member Services, Oregon Bio
(left) and Emily Stump, Sr.
Quality Engineer, Genentech (right)

Mentoring: Mentor match up! This session will explore the positive impact that mentorship can have on your career trajectory. Best practices for establishing and maintaining mentoring relationships for both mentors and mentees will be discussed. Participants should have a desire to either be a mentor or find a mentor.

Kate Winchester (left)

Head of Operational Excellence,
Genentech

Leadership: Shifting the traditional leadership mindset - how to use powerful servant leadership style to unleash the full potential of individuals on your team and to empower those around you. At this station participants will learn and practice key concepts to truly listen, increase awareness, dream big, provide support and build capabilities in others.

Jackie Wirz, Asst Dean, OHSU (above left) and Stephanie Arnheim (above right), Business Consultant, Stephanie Connects

Networking: Learning to Love it! Become comfortable and confident in your own skin as you grow your connections. At this station, participants will learn key tips and tricks to give them the networking skills necessary to conquer social environments. From pre-event prep to in-the-moment tools, from opening Hello to best practices for follow up, we'll give you the confidence to make the most of your evening.

